Benefits of NECA Membership

What Does NECA Do?

The National Electrical and Communications Association (NECA) are the peak body representing electrical and communications contractors Australia-wide, from employers and business people to technicians.

NECA employs specialists in industrial relations, workplace health and safety, human resources, education and training, business management and marketing, technical regulations and technology who are on-hand to offer advice on a range of topics, as well as provide representation and support in industrial relations matters.

The Association actively represents the needs and entitlements of contractors at all levels of government and industry, ensuring members' needs are heard. We work with the industry on a range of levels to ensure a sustainable workforce for all and actively advocate for our members in areas such as licensing, training, regulations and more.
