

Business Women's Network

NECA Victoria has established a Business Women's Network to develop goals and strategies for women involved in the electrical contracting industry to help raise awareness of their valuable contribution and to identify the needs of women as partners, employees, apprentices and tradespersons in all areas of the business.

The network is open to all women within a business that is a financial member of NECA Victoria.

The network meets on a bi-monthly basis and conducts relevant seminars and training courses. If you are interested in the group, you may be placed on the mailing list for information and meeting notices. It's easy and it's free. To place your details on the Business Women's Network mailing list, just complete the bottom section of this form and return to Catherine Davies NECA Victoria.

Testimonials

I have been attending the NECA Business Women's Network Seminars for over seven years and I believe that I have gained something from every seminar I have attended. The topics covered are diverse, informative and interesting. The information provided is concise and is pitched at a level appropriate for attendees. The seminars also provide a valuable opportunity to network and establish contacts with other women in the industry. I have enjoyed all aspects of the NBWN seminars and would encourage other women in the industry to attend.

Sonia Welsford, Sonmec Electrical Pty Ltd

I cannot recommend the NBWN enough. Since attending my first training session I have felt more confident working in our electrical contracting business. The support and mentoring from other women who have more experience in the industry has been fantastic. I found the relaxed open environment to be particularly beneficial. The group even gave me the confidence to join my first committee, the "NECA Business Women's Network".

Deborah Munro, Alert Electrical Services.
